NCPDP Foundation Awards $10,000 in Scholarship Funds to 3 College of Pharmacy Students at Northwestern University

SCOTTSDALE, AZ – May 18, 2015 – NCPDP Foundation, a 501(c)(3) nonprofit charitable organization that is affiliated with NCPDP, announced today that it has awarded $10,000 in scholarship funds to 3 College of Pharmacy students at Northwestern University. The scholarship program provides financial support for promising pharmacy students who have demonstrated leadership and an interest in making a positive difference in the pharmacy profession.

The scholarship recognizes pharmacy students with a specific understanding of the changing role of the pharmacist and the transformative impact of health information technology.

Northwestern University's College of Pharmacy recently held a scholarship ceremony to present the scholarships to the following recipients:

- Delia Saadeh
- Maelee Miller
- Dimpna Choksi

"We are very pleased with the support provided by NCPDP," stated Dr. Mitchell R. Emerson, Dean of the Northwestern University College of Pharmacy-Glendale. "Their strong level of commitment to advancing the pharmacy profession is a shining example. By honoring these three future pharmacists, NCPDP is reinvesting in the future. I have no doubt that these students will make a difference and positively impact not only the patients that they serve, but the profession as a whole."

Charlie Oltman, MBA, CHC, President of NCPDP Foundation explained, "We are committed to supporting the valuable role of pharmacists in improving patient care and health outcomes. The scholarship recognizes pharmacy students who are seeking to learn more about informatics in pharmacy and who have the potential to become leaders for the profession."
